Description

Albuquerque Municipal Airport terminal and new hangar in Albuquerque, New Mexico. The central image is a panoramic view of a large aircraft hangar in the left frame, and the passenger terminal building in the right frame. Both buildings are in pueblo style architecture. The hangar has a curved roof and a large door in the center of the building. There is a row of newly planted trees outside near the entrance. The terminal building is a long building with exposed beams and posts. It has several windows across the front. There is a tall tower on the roof in the center of the building above the entrance. A staircase is leading up to the entrance in the covered porch. The area outside is landscaped with new trees and bushes. There is a row of several parked cars in front of the buildings.
